NÜRNBERG

Nürnberg is a city on the river Pegnitz and on the Rhine–Main–Danube Canal in the German state of Bavaria, in the administrative region of Middle Franconia, about 170 kilometres (north of Munich). It is the second-largest city in Bavaria (after Munich), and the largest in Franconia. The urban area also includes Fürth, Erlangen and Schwabach. As of 2016 the "European Metropolitan Area Nürnberg" had approximately 3.5 million inhabitants.

Nürnberg is often referred to as having been the 'unofficial capital' of the Holy Roman Empire, particularly because Imperial Diet (Reichstag) and courts met at Nürnberg Castle. The Diets of Nürnberg were an important part of the administrative structure of the empire. The increasing demand of the royal court and the increasing importance of the city attracted trade and commerce to Nürnberg.

Nürnberg was an early centre of humanism, science, printing, and mechanical invention. The city contributed much to the science of astronomy. In 1471 Johannes Mueller of Königsberg (Bavaria), built an astronomical observatory in Nürnberg and published many important astronomical charts. In 1515, Albrecht Dürer, a native of Nürnberg created woodcuts of the first maps of the stars of the northern and southern hemispheres, producing the first printed star charts, which had been ordered by Johannes Stabius. Around 1515 Dürer also published the "Stabiussche Weltkarte", the first perspective drawing of the terrestrial globe. Perhaps most famously, the main part of Nicolaus Copernicus's work was published in Nürnberg in 1543.

The academy of fine arts situated in Nürnberg is the oldest art academy in central Europe and looks back to a tradition of 350 years of artistic education. Nürnberg is also famous for its Christkindlesmarkt (Christmas market), which draws well over a million shoppers each year. The market is famous for its handmade ornaments and delicacies.

People can visit the majestic Max-Morlock-Stadion which is the soccer stadium of Bundesliga club 1. FC Nürnberg (known locally as "Der Club") and which accommodates 50,000 spectators. The club was founded in 1900 and plays in the 2. Bundesliga (2017–18 season).

> TRAINING PERIOD

To provide world-class training opportunities for top youth soccer players in one of the best soccer camps in Europe, the International Fútbol X-Change has partnered with German semi-professional clubs—SG Quelle Fürth, FSV Erlangen-Bruck, and Baierischer SV—to allow a limited number of players to train amongst their youth teams.

Contrary to the traditional international soccer tour where teams travel to play against foreign teams, our Germany international soccer program immerses players in the foreign game, experiencing the German game as if they were a part of the team.

Most mornings, players train under the instruction of the coaches of IFX. Licensed German trainers lead the daily training, engaging the group in technical drills and tactical maneuvering. Players will then join the SG Quelle Fürth, FSV Erlangen Bruck, or Baierischer SV youth teams in the afternoons to participate in their normal training sessions. Training consists normally of three days per week of club training.

FACILITIES
